Everywhere is bustle. The crowds are well behaved, and police arrangements so perfect that of the military, Grand Army posts and other societies experience but little inconvenience in going to place assigned them. The funeral cortege will undoubtedly be the grandest and most imposing of its kind ever witnessed in this or any other city of the globe. Fully one hundred thousand men will follow the body to the grave at River-

At precisely 1 o'clock in the morning the Hall were closed, and the crowds which had into the vestibule and passing the catafalque received a sudden check. The line ceased moving and therein looked askance at their neighbors when word was passed by the police detail to keep those in line in order, that no more would be admitted. Thousands were disappointed, and their countenances plainly expressed their chagrin. The lines WILL MAKE LIBERAL CASH ADVANCES plainly expressed their chagrin. The lines on same. Would invite correspondence, as at the time extended clear around the park to terms, with a view to shipments for the coming and for some distance along Broad way and and for some distance along Broadway and adjacent streets. It is estimated fully three hundred thousand people viewed the remains of the dead general while lying in state here.

So burrielly had they to pass through that only a mere glance at the calm face was allowed. Immediately after the close of the gates the plaza was cleared and in a few minutes the police were in full possession guarding every approach and allowing no one but the privileged to come within a stone's throw of the building in which the nation's dead lay. The undertaker at once took charge. None but the police and guards and all night reporters were present at the time. "Any here who desire to view the renains will step forward at once," said the undertaker, and his voice echoed in the dark still corridors. All present passed by the casket and the lying in state of the ex-presi-

lent had ended. Undertaker Merritt then brushed the glass plates above the bod; ar : drev from their places the two lids which cover the casket. The four screws in each were turned down and the face of the dead had been closed forever from view, unless there shall in the future come a request to remove the lids. In the final examination of the burial case the undertaker found a stain of tobacco joice on the velvet coverings. With indig nant ejaculations it was removed. Then the dead was left in care of the guards who stood erect and silent within the closed from gates and beneath the black drapings. The night wore on and the gray of day light was creeping up the east. The still air of the tomb-like corridors became heavy with the perfume of withering flowers. Near the dead a huge piece, "The Gates Ajar," had a place at the head of the casket and the sweet smell of lilies was borne down to those who stood and watched. A great lors shoe of red and yellow rose buds added listr fragrance, and a cross and crown from Mayor Latrobe, of Bultimore, sent out its mote of heavy perfume that settled on the Unt there was a tribute that hore no fra
